WELCOME

We're all very excited to welcome Sir Ian McKellen at the beginning of July. The sell-out show is a fundraiser as part of our 125 year anniversary celebrations.

However, much of our everyday success is down to our volunteers—I am so grateful to them. They keep every event running smoothly. Just this year, volunteers have also raised thousands through our anniversary raffle and Adopt A Year, helped deliver our audience survey, and promoted our shows.

We have many great events this quarter, but one concert I'm especially excited about is the Dhol Foundation—the UK's best known bhangra band. They even played at the Queen's jubilee and the closing of the London Olympics.

In the last few months the Marine took two big steps forward. Our new website was launched, kindly paid for by our patron Ian Gillan.

We also gained a wedding license. Couples have been able to have their wedding receptions here for a while, but this means ceremonies are now possible. We have some great partners for music, photography, flowers, and food. The weddings benefit everybody—our seaside location is a great place to get married, we're backing local businesses, and the income supports our central aim of providing culture for all.
